Journey To The Crown

People often ask how I got into pageantry. It all started in 2019 when I saw an ad for finding “ASHLEY STEWART" contest. I thought to myself that looks like fun, and I can a have a chance of winning free clothing from my favorite store. I signed up but couldn't make it because of my work schedule. I was a little disappointed but I still wanted to try something different. I was on Facebook one day and saw an ad for MS. FULL FIGURED GEORGIA PAGEANT. Everyone knows you can't trust everything you see on the internet but registration was only $20 dollars so I took a chance. I thought the most that can happen is someone will get me for my money, or I'll be in a pageant. I was surprise to get a response in my email inviting me to come to Atlanta to audition for the show. I told my husband the good news and I called my friend and asked her to come with me to Atlanta on a road trip. I told her either we are going to an audition or lunch in Atlanta. I live in Savannah Ga which is about 4 hours from Atlanta GA. When we arrived in Atlanta we found the location of the audition, but we were early so we went to a large gas station and changed our clothes (before Covid) to get ready. After we changed we notice ladies going into the place where the auditions were held which happened to be a local Ashley Stewart..hmmm talk about an coincidence. The panel asked me some questions and asked me to walk. They took my picture and said check my email for results.

I got the news I made the auditions and was selected for the show about a week or two later. I was so excited I cried. The first thing I did was tell my husband he seemed uninterested, so I called my friend and we screamed together. I knew that going back and forth going to Atlanta was going to cost me some extra money so I decided to door dash after work. It kept me away from home, but I made sure I told my husband what I was doing, and where I was going. To be safe my son rode with me so I would not be by myself. The first big meet and greet was coming up and I was very excited.

My husband began to become upset with me door dashing because it kept me out of the house. I wasn’t doing anything before just working and coming home. I finally had something I can call my own. One night I happened to come home late from work and picking up the kids from work and school, my husband was really upset and began to yell at me and the kids, he also accused me of being with another man. Side note my husband was 6 feet tall and full of muscles trust me he is one man I never wanted to be upset. He scared me to death just by yelling. He controls everything I did from how I dressed to how my hair was done. He told me I was his Barbie doll and I had to be in his eye site at all times. Ok back to the story, I tried to explain to my husband what happened but he was to upset to hear what I was saying. I never did anything without letting him know first because I believe in honoring my husband. We were having problems in our marriage before the pageant. To be honest it wasn't him and I personally we had a lot of outside factors that was causing us problems aka. Work and family members, if you know you know.

That same night things got really out of hand, my husband took a hammer a busted out all the windows of my brand new 2017 car someone blessed me with. I was devastated and scared to death. I have never seen him so angry. He recently was recovering from a very serious surgery and was on meds at the time, which is what I believed to be a contributing factor to his outrage. I called the police to have him escorted out of the house, because I was scared for the life of my children and myself. He ran from the police but they caught him not to far from our home. I thought he was going to spend the night in jail to cool off, but they kept him because destroying personal property was a felony. He also had a background in violence. I did mention we lived in Georgia.

Everything happened right before the holidays. My family was broken, my home and car was destroyed I didn’t know what to do. Most people would have given up on a pageant, but I would not give up. I called to director of the pageant to let her know what happened and showed her pictures of my car. She did my meet and greet over the phone, but she really thought like everyone else I wouldn’t return. I kept on trying I was not going to let this situation stop me. I continued to work. I had to move out of my apartment into a close friend’s house so I can save up to get a new place to live. This was the second apartment I lost due to my husband’s anger. I was able to make it to two meetings I would get to the greyhound station at 6:30 am to catch a bus to Atlanta and change in the bathrooms, and catch a Lyft to the meetings. Then leave the meetings take a Lyft back to the Greyhound station change back into my travel clothes and ride back to Savannah then take a Lyft home at 1am in the morning. Just to get up and be at work at 10am.

Then Covid hit the nation. We were shut down for a little while which gave me a chance to rest and the pageant was doing everything virtually. We had to make videos showing that we were working on everything they taught us. What I didn't realized was how much I was crying late at night about everything that happened between my husband and me. I would hear him saying cruel things to me whenever I would get dressed to take pictures, and I would also hear him give me tips on how to do my hair and make-up. But my husband wasn't around he was in jail, they shut down the courts also due to COVID, I was having a mental and emotional breakdown and not realizing it. Mental abuse is real. I am a fighter so I pushed all that pain behind me because I still had to be a mother I didn't want to scare my kids. I believe God had his hand on me the entire time someone else would have flipped out. My close friends were praying for me and I thank them deeply.

About February or March of 2020 the pageant was back on I was so excited we were able to have meetings and take group pictures with mask on, but still seeing the ladies meant a lot to me. I was also called back to work and the stimulus helped a lot. Little by little I was able to get my car fixed, but I was not able to move yet because losing those apartments with my husband looked bad on my credit. Nevertheless, I kept pressing on. Thank God for good friends. We began having in person dance rehearsals for the opening of the pageant which was slated for May 2020. Dance rehearsals were hard, and two things happen all those emotions came pouring out. I had a breakdown. I taught young ladies to dance for years, but it's different when you are in the front more than being in the background. I decided not to give in to my emotions and dance like never before, I was more determined to get the crown than ever so many people were counting me out expecting me to lose, they even made bets and jokes about it.

Back in June 2019 God blessed me to become an Evangelist. The ladies in the pageant were having all kinds of trouble and they were even breaking down in dance rehearsals. So I put my issues on the backburner and one of my sisters and I in the pageant began to pray for them and preach the word of God. They gave me the nickname "REV". Well once I put the whole amour of God back on nothing could stop me. My close friend whom I was staying with had to step back from helping me with the pageant due to work and family issues. So my youngest daughter stepped in and help me. She also was my dance teacher. I taught her to dance all her life, and now she had to teach me. She did such a good job she began to teach all the ladies. They gave her the nickname SARGE, because she got us right together so much so if you say cluster to the 2020 queens we will scream..lol.

Well now pageant day was upon us and it was time to get ready for the show I was a nervous wreck. My daughter stepped up to the plate, and said to me "MOMMA I GOT IT!" well that put me right in my place because she said me a tone that calm me down and gave me strength at the same time. The Pageant was going well until the end when they began to give out the crowns. I wanted to at least get Covergirl because the young man that took my photos was great. I wanted to win it for him. It came down to the wire there were only 4 crowns left my pageant sister was about to cry because she hadn't won anything yet, I told her it's not over until it was over, and hold her head up because whether we are crowned or not we are still queens, right then they call her name. I was so excited for her. Now the only crowns that were left were national crowns. The director called the first runner up for my category which was Ms. Exquisite Full figure Georgia that was everyone over the age of forty. She did not say my name. I began to tear up, my daughter looked at me and said mamma you did your best don't you dare cry. The director got the card with the national winner name on it, I breathed in deeply, because I believe my close friend who I was praying with won, and I was ok with it because she deserved it she did so much for me during the pageant process I had no complaints. Then the director said" And the new 2020 Ms. Exquisite Full Figure Georgia issss….Glenda Hayes!". I was in shock and broke down crying because after all I had been through I really won!

Part 2 the Nationals 2021….what a journey of self-discovery. ■

When Loving You, Is Killing, Me What Do I Do?

Do we kiss and say goodbye? Or do we fight like heck and continue to try?

Many times in relationships we get into disagreements aad arguments and never made an agreement to fight fair. Often times we are very disrespectful toward one another, and we never get the root of the problem. Instead of talkng to each other about the problem, we feel the need to talk to everybody else. You do not have to just survive; you can endure. You can avoid lot of unnecessary drama and confusion if you would simply dial 9-1-1 in the spirit and obtain the help that you need to live. Stop trying to help eveyone else and help yourself.

This is the right time to MASK UP and breathe again. We are riding the airplane of ife. If there is turbulence place the mask over yourself first. Many of us were never taught to minister to ourselves first. We were taught to serve and bless others first, but that's not the correct way. Love others AS you LOVE YOURSELF. This simply means that if you are healthy in your emotions then you can help someone else. If you are healthy in your finances then you can help someone else. If you are secure in whom you are, then you can be a life coach to others. If you are disciplined and mild mannered, then you can bring clamness to others and avoid many conflicts.

Sadly today, most of us have false humility and run ourselves silly providing for others, advising others, instructing families, and supervising others' children when all hell and chaos has broken out in our own homes. In this next season now that you've gotten this nugget, MASK UP and minister to yourself. Bring healing to yourself first. Make sure you're right. Make sure you're balanced. Make sure you can breathe, and difinitely make sure you are living life on purpose.

If you argue frequently in your marriage, perhaps you should try arguing naked. Try that, and tell how it works for you. I would not recommend going long extended periods without touching on another. This only adds insult to injury.

Public Victory but Private Shame

So many men could be dealing with a little boy issue and so many women could be dealing with a little girl issue. Often times, it is a childhood issue which has lingered for years. Some issues such as rape, molestation, violation, abandonment, isolation, adoption, abortion, abuse, divorce, poverty, lack of education or low self-esteem will cause the person to be silent, until the root of the problem has been dealt with and resolved. If you intend to build the relationship then you should stop speaking negative and ask for the necessary tools to assist you in bringing healing. Try talking about it to the appropriate person in a counseling session.

Often times, men are reluctant to open up their hearts and share. You do need to invest in our own delivdrance and if not for yourself, then for your mate. If one person hurts, then we both hurt, and the entire family suffers. You don't have to be a strong man in public and conquer the world but be afraid to get healing for yourself. Sometimes help need help. You shouldn't have to die while leading. Jesus died already. You should relax, get healed and then help others. We know who that one person is in the family because everyone avoids telling them the truth. They are afraid to tell them; they intimidate others. They have portrayed themselves as a private person, but they are actually hurting and do not know how to get involved or how to show love because of their own insecurities. ■

God's Glory by Debra Turner Williams

2 Corinthians 4:6 says, "For God, who commanded, light shall shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

My journey with God took place in 1994. I presented myself to God with my whole heart and as my living sacrifice. Within six months of coming into a relationship with God, I was falling away from the church and from my walk with God. I was venturing away from His awesome and sincere love that He personally had for me. I experience the reality that if it had not been for God shining a light in my heart and delivering me, hell would have been my place of suffrage both natural and spiritual.

Oftentimes, people wonder who would leave a Person who is so loving and so gracious towards you. Who would walk away from a Man who is so genuine and who makes you feel brand new and revived? The answer to this question is someone who felt the love of God, but who did not experience the love from the members in the church.
When members of a church are broken, unstable, and emotionally defeated, it makes it hard for them to nurture others. We, as a people, must remember that in order to be successful in the house of God, we must be delivered from that which has us bond.

I personally experience that once I ventured away from the church, the church members would not acknowledge my existence. When I spoke to them in passing or outside the four walls of the church building, they would turn their heads and pretend that I wasn't present. When I approached the members, they would walk away from me in the opposite direction. This behavior from the church members was conveyed toward me as a non-acceptance attitude because of a temporarily backslidden state in which I encountered. Well, this is the perspective from which I internalized their behavior.

I realized that to embody God's love is the supreme spiritual encounter. I also think that to have church members' physically and socially support are as important toward maintaining, sustaining, and thriving in and toward the ultimate resting place of God's love. This presents to me the triangle of growing in the grace and admonition of the Lord: God's love, the church, and the new convert.

At this point, I decided to return to God and the church, despite how badly I was made to feel by the church members. A steadfast mind to serve God should never become a factor in one's decision to serve and develop a relationship with God. Irrespectively of how one treats you, that should not be a gauge for maintaining a steadfast relationship with the Lord. Therefore, as a prodigal son (daughter), I returned to my Father. And yes, I was embraced with royalty from My Father; I am yet receiving the dividends from my decision.

Psalms 30:5 says, "Weeping may endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." In the morning and mornings after that, I found God's glory. I returned to God a year later and have been serving the Lord and the church for the last twenty-five years. I decided to be the person who makes a difference. I strive to show love, the love of God that is shown aboard to someone in the church and/or who left the church. Yes, I continue to bask in God's glory! ▬

No Ordinary Love

Rev. Michael and Nancy Thompson

Better a small serving of vegetables with love than a fattened calf with hatred. (Proverbs 15:17)

Michael:

I sat on my couch one day. I was reflecting on past relationships and at that time, I was alone spending more time with God. I sat with tears in my eyes. I prayed to God and told Him that if it was His will that I spend the rest of my life alone, then I would accept His will for me. But, if He would give me someone, I promised Him that I would honor her and cherish her but, He, would have to do the choosing. My choices in my past weren't the best. And one Sunday, it was like a beam of light showed on Nancy. And even though she had been at the church for some time, it was like I had never seen her before.

The euphoria of being in love is something that can sometimes be indescribable. We think about the happy day when we say I do and we have visions of happily ever after with no worries or problems. At times we base love on the material or the physical. Some people look at love based on the amount of money. The more money, the more the love. You may look at the physical attributes of a man or a woman. And that may be true to the initial attraction. The love Nancy and I share is based on the prayers that God answered for us. God knew what we needed for our lives. God did not just bless me with a wife, he blessed me with that help. (helpmeet) It's not just help within the home. Our love is designed to better each other. This love works to correct those areas and be the best that we can be for ourselves and each other.

Our marriage is not just for each other. What we represent is a God-Based love that reflects God's love. Our love is a testament to the fact that if your heart desires a special love like never before, then that is possible. What we reflect is also for those who see us to know that if they are looking for that it is obtainable. And if some have a marriage and seemingly have lost the love that brought them together.

We know that marriage is work. Both of us are willing to put in the work, but it will not work if we don't work together. Marriage is a classroom that you can never graduate from. Marriage is constantly learning of and from each other. What couples do is expect the same year after year, but time brings about a change. And you have to adjust to the changes. You have to be together through it all. That is what we strive to do. And above all, we keep God at the forefront in this. It's through His guidance and our prayers that we grow stronger against anything that may come to threaten our union. That's what makes this no ordinary love. It's our love for God that stands above it all. And it's the dedication to God to honor that love.

we took were not so much to each other, but to God to say that, as you brought us together, we will be in this through the best of times and the worst. We know that God will get the glory in our marriage.

This love is about seeing the best for each other and enhancing and motivating each other and the marriage. This is not a relationship of competition. As one is advancing, the other celebrates. We do what is needed to see that we grow together and we rise together. And the only way that happens is that we truly support each other.

There are people that say marriage is not work. But never kid yourself. If both of you aren't willing to put in the work, then it will be destined to fail. Marriage is a partnership. I have always said that there are people who will just ride in your wagon and there are people who will help pull it. You want a partner that will pull it through the mountains and valleys, the smooth and the bumpy. This is what makes it no ordinary love. It makes it extra-ordinary. And God gets the glory in it.

Nancy:

I remember rushing into my office in the West Lawn area of Chicago a few years ago and hearing a voice cry out, "Hey New Faith!". I turned to meet eyes with Rev. Michael and a big smile. He was there for training that happened to be held at my job site. We exchanged a brief greeting as I ran to my cubicle to start my day. Neither of us knew each other and we never crossed paths again after that initial greeting and mutual exchange of smiles. It was some years later after Rev. Michael asked if he could take me to dinner that I was reminded of the tall man with the big smile on his face. Sometimes God will give you a glimpse of your future and bring it back when you need it most.

I had been damaged emotionally from various experiences in my life. I remember crying out to God wanting to find true love and finding peace in hearing, "…love God and love yourself…". Putting those priorities in place brought good things in my life. I trusted that God knew WHAT I needed and WHEN I needed it. Forgiveness, inner healing, and Godly counsel positioned me for partnership. Without healing, you can reject a blessing because of past hurts. I began to tell myself that I am open for love and that my King will see me, know me, and I will know him. One day Michael prayed for God to choose his partner, and he SAW me.

Dictionary.com defines ordinary as usual, normal, or of no special quality. God has made each and every one of us extra-ordinary. No hair on our head is alike just like the billions of snowflakes that fall to the ground. The one God has ordained for you, will be built to support and strengthen what God has placed in you. God will fitly join you together as one. One vision and not division (die-vision). It doesn't mean you are a clone or lack independence, but you will become strength to one another's divine mission, purpose, and calling. Ecclesiastes 4:9-10 NIV says, "Two are better than one because they have a good return for their labor: If either of them falls down, one can help the other up." This text talks about the power of partnership.

An extra-ordinary partnership is comprised of giving. At the beginning of our friendship, Michael gave to support my vision. I was planning a show to honor the late Phyllis Hyman and was very overwhelmed with all of the details. Michael created the flyer, made sure I had security for the venue, and sold tickets. All relationships require work to maintain the quality of the partnership. We often tire of the consistent "showing up" that is necessary. During this pandemic, I am not producing any shows but Michael consistently "shows up" by helping to cook, clean, or whatever is needed. An extra-ordinary partnership is nurtured by humility, self-sacrifice, and most of all, love.

This is what makes our love anything but ordinary. It makes it extra-ordinary. So, from us to you: It's the bumps on the road as you travel that try to keep you from your destination. We all hit bumps, but don't lose the focus on your destination, and don't be afraid. Your fears may be the wall that block you from seeing the blessing for your life. Never give up on the road. God can give you the desires of your heart. And if you desire to love and share with someone for a lifetime, then He will give you that extra-ordinary love.

Delight yourself in the LORD, and he will give you the desires of your heart.
(Psalm 37:4)

Keep the faith and guard the love.
We pray extra-ordinary love.

WOMAN TO WOMAN

THE CONFIDENT WOMAN

2013 CHICAGO FASHION SHOW

Woman To Woman The Confident Woman, Inc. is a 501c3 non-profit organization in three locations: Tempe, AZ; Chicago, IL; Milwaukee, WI.

WTW The Confident Woman has partnered with I-Help Homeless Shelter. Every 3rd Saturday of the month, we meet with the women from the shelter to encourage them by speaking life, building their self-esteem and confidence, and handing out care bags.

Once a year, WTW The Confident Woman hosts a Conference, Black Tie Fundraiser, Dinner, Fashion Show, and Silent Auction in Arizona raising money for our transitional housing and supportive services.

Our fashion shows are unique. Some of our featured models are women from homeless shelters; we teach the women the technique of runway modeling: Fashion designers are flown in from across the states; makeup artists and hairstylists are from Arizona. We will have vendors, gift bags, raffles, gift certificates, and more at the fashion show.

Everything is Coming Up Love

Down through the annals of time, there have been many songs, poems, movies and stories that highlight various versions of what real love is. One of my favorite love ballad singers of all times was Luther Vandross. His voice was mesmerizing and the lyrics unforgettable. He graced the world with so many amazing hits like: The Power of Love, Still in Love, Love Won't Let Me Wait, Here and Now, just to name a few. Luther's music has been played around the world at weddings, engagement parties and even for late night rendezvous.

There is power in music and there is undeniable power in love. God is love and with that love, He gave His best by way of Jesus Christ. Solomon described it this way, "Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it; If a man would give all the substance of his house for Love, it would utterly be contemned (Solomon 8:7). Solomon was a man who knew what love was and experienced a lot of it in his lifetime.

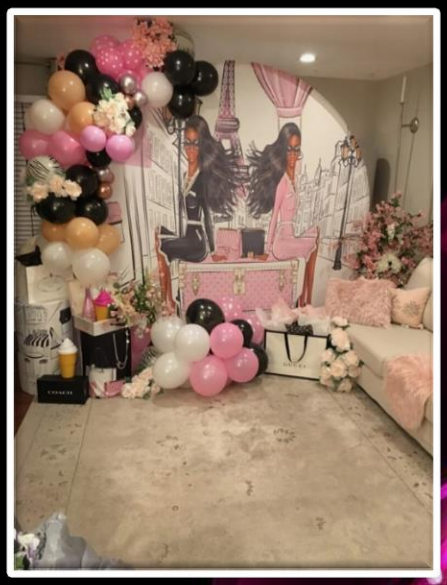

Solomon depicted the power of love as having the ability to stand and withstand every opposing force that would come against it when in its purest form. Because love is patient and it is kind, love takes the intricate, delicate and complex pieces of our lives and weaves them into a beautiful tapestry. This is the masterpiece on display from what others called useless, fragmented and discombobulated. Where would we be if not for love?

Billy Dee Williams, in Lady Sings the Blues, said "Love is nothing if you have no one to share it with." In this month of February, where love is expressed in enormous measure, open your heart to receive the love that's being extended to you from family, friends, loved ones and yes, even that potential love interest. You never know where you'll find the love you've been waiting on or believing for. Love has the audacity to show up expectantly and overwhelm the heart that is ready to receive it! Don't despise the wrapping but recognize it's a hand-crafted gift from God just for you. Love is in full bloom so enjoy your rose!
